LONDRES (A.F.).— Se informa oficialmente que el general Johannes von Blaskowitz, uno de los mejores generales de la Wehrmacht, comandó a las tropas alemanas en Italia. Este oficial es uno de los conductores más afortunados de Reich, e intervino brillantemente en la campaña de Polonia. Posteriormente fracasó en su carrera por haber tenido altercados con Hitler. Las tropas ortieamericanas y británicas siguen avanzando tierra adentro y encontraron poderosas fuerzas alemanas en las cercanías de Salerno, 32 kilómetros al sur de Nápoles, sobre el golfo de Salerno. Dichas fuerzas enemigas fueron identificadas como la décimo-sexta división acorazada nazi.

Bajo el fuego de la artillería de la flota al mando del vicealmirante Henry Hewitt, de la flota británica, las tropas aliadas desembarcaron nuevos y poderosísimos efectivos en las cabezas de puente, con el propósito de apoderarse de todo el sur de Italia.

No obstante el armisticio con Italia, enormes fuerzas aéreas aliadas bombardearon violentamente objetivos de toda la península, atacando especialmente los caminos que llevan a Nápoles y Canello.

Mientras el mariscal Badoglio parece seguir al pie de la letra su convenio de rendición incondicional de todas las fuerzas armadas de Italia, se teme en el norte de África que los alemanes intenten apoderarse de la capital italiana, a fin de restaurar el régimen.
